Low intake of iron in daily meal is the cause for anemia. Anemia is a manifestation of low intake of iron and can be treated prevented with increasing intake of iron daily.

A top-down view of a traditional Indonesian meal. The dishes are served on ornate metal plates. Clockwise from top-left: a plate of fried fish (ikan goreng) with vegetables and shredded cheese; a plate of white rice topped with fried shallots; a plate of fresh salad with lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers, and lemon wedges; and a plate of a yellow curry (kari) with chicken and vegetables. A small bowl of yellow soup is visible in the top right. The text "Low iron in daily meal is cause for many health problems you may experience" is overlaid in white, centered over the rice and salad plates.
